Pulwama attack cctv footage

Tensions between India and Pakistan escalated after a JeM terrorist rammed an explosive-laden car into a CRPF convoy on February 14 in Jammu and Kashmir's Pulwama. Some social media users have been working overtime to churn out several videos on terrorism and pass them off as the recent Pulwama attack, where at least 40 CRPF jawans died in an explosion. The suicide bomb attack, claimed by the Pakistan-based Jaish-e-Mohammed, on the security convoy was the worst strike on forces Jammu and Kashmir in decades. In the wake of Pulwama attack in Jammu-Kashmir, social media platforms have been inundated with a barrage of fake news and misinformation. Several teams are working on gathering technical evidence, the NIA top brass is learnt to have assured the government that they will unravel the conspiracy very soon, sources told WION. People have been claiming that the video was CCTV footage of the Pulwama attack from Thursday, which left the nation in deep sorrow. By the time this story was filed, the video had already received thousands of views and shared nearly two hundred times on Facebook. A huge explosion occurs at the 11-second mark and this is being widely shared as the footage from Pulwama attack. The footage was originally tracked down to a vehicle-borne improvised explosive device (VBIED) that occurred in September 2007. Read | How China stood in India's way to list JeM chief Maulana Masood Azhar as 'global terrorist' The team then flagged the issue to Facebook. The responsibility of the attack was claimed by Pakistan-based terror group Jaish-e-Mohammed. The attack claimed lives of over 40 CRPF personnel. But when you look at the streets, you can make out that it is not Kashmir," he said. Taking to indianexpress.com, Jency Jacob, Managing Editor of Boom Live said they had received information about the video via their WhatsApp helpline. "There is no specific data on how many platforms was the video shared. India Today's Anti Fake News War Room (AFWA) found that this was a 12-year-old video from Baghdad and not from the recent Pulwama terror attack. The Facebook page 'Rajsthani Media' posted this video with a caption that reads, "CCTV video from Pulwama terror attack (Pulwama me aatankwadi hamle ke CCTV video). "Click here to watch the video in the 29-second video, a few vehicles can be seen on the road. One such post was flagged by Boom Live, a fact-checking website. The state police have now been ordered to secure both the Srinagar-Sonamarg highway as well as Jammu-Srinagar Highway by installing a CCTV surveillance system. However, fact-check by Boom Live revealed that the footage was originally of an IED blast that occurred in Iraq in 2007. The reverse image showed that the video was in fact from an explosion that occurred near the Syrian town of al-Rai near the Turkish border on February 12, 2019. The Jammu-Srinagar Highway, in fact, had no CCTV cameras prior to the attack. Meanwhile, in another development, the chief of air staff of Pakistan's Air Force visited a forward operating base to oversee operational preparedness of the Pakistani forces. The officer said that the Pakistani armed forces were fully capable of tackling all kinds of challenges and are ready to thwart any kind of aggression. "People had sent us the video asking if the footage was actually from Pulwama. But we immediately flagged it to Facebook who takes the call if it needs to be pulled off the platform," Jacob added. "The fact that none of the media channels had reported any CCTV footage from the area was a red flag," he said. The original video was 58 seconds long (watch the video below) and had a time and date stamp on the top which reads "9/2/2007 (September 2, 2007) 3:54:52 PM". We also found stills from the same video on Reddit. The 30-second long video, possibly captured through a CCTV camera mounted at a distance, shows a convoy of vehicles passing through the road. The Boom team has also debunked another fake news that passed off video from a Syrian car bombing as footage from Pulwama. Another user, Maninorbit, confirmed the same in the video and claimed to be present at Camp Taji at the time of the attack. When we searched about the blast at Camp Taji in 2007 on the Internet, we found media reports that mentioned terror attacks took place at that time in Iraq. Among these, Camp Taji attack was the one which killed three people and injured seven. The archived version of the post can be seen here. The video has also been shared on Twitter and other social media platforms. When we reverse searched the video we found the original video on YouTube that was published on March 5, 2008. The team then did a reverse image search on Google and found that the video was uploaded by multiple YouTube users as early as April 2008. In the video that is traced to the Syrian-Turkish border, the camera captured a car being bombed near a security checkpoint. In a related development, reports said Islamabad had decided to move troops from the western border to its eastern border. One such video of a blast at a highway is going viral on social media with the claim that it is footage of the Pulwama attack. An old video of an attack in Iraq was being passed off as CCTV footage of the Pulwama attack that left 40 CRPF jawans dead in Jammu-Kashmir. It occurred after the Pakistan Army violated ceasefire along the Line of Control (LoC) in Jammu and Kashmir's Nowshera sector over the weekend. Claim CCTV video of Pulwama terror attack Conclusion Viral video is not from Pulwama but of Baghdad's Camp Taji attack in the year 2007. The number of crows determines the intensity of the lie. 1 Crow: Half True 2 Crows: Mostly lies 3 Crows: Absolutely false In a crucial breakthrough that could provide leads into the investigation of the Pulwama terror attack, the National Investigating Agency (NIA) has obtained a crucial CCTV footage of the car that was used in the attack. The CCTV footage captures the explosive-laden Maruti Eeco car, a 2010-11 model, being driven by the suicide bomber, Aadil Ahmad Dar. The owner of the car has been identified and is absconding. A user named 'WhiteSix' claimed the video was from Baghdad where a "vehicle-borne improvised explosive device" (VBIED) was detonated outside Camp Taji. The nine-second video went viral on Facebook, Twitter and YouTube with users claiming that it was from Pulwama. The archived version of one such report can be seen here. India Today confirmed that the viral video is not from Pulwama but from Baghdad when a VBIED blast took place outside Camp Taji in 2007. The UN, the US, and several other major world powers have held JeM responsible for the attack. Officials in Srinagar believe both highways are crucial for the security forces because of the regular movement of convoys.
