"I was on the way to Wallan, with my husband and I thought, 'Oh God, how about it.'" Albury's James Fallon Secondary School has won an Australian education for the Yeara School Regional School has about 85 students with English as an additional dialect and at least 140 Aborogene fund students or narrow islands of Torres It is one of the 50 Australian schools that use Big Picture Australia Designms Parrett has been director of the 740 students School in North Albury since 2016. She said she was surprised to hear that they had overcome seven other finalists in the category, which included public schools And no public, but that Australian Education Award was recognition of hard work hard. "It is a testimony of the team and how we work as a school community; we do incredible things here and it is great to be recognized throughout the country." Our team and our school students and our parents and our caregivers can all say "Wow, we are the best Regional School of the Paëes." This is very cool. "James Fallon High School has about 740 students, with a great time in diversity and in the arts. Parrett said that the school was evaluated in things like curriculum, teaching and learning, professional learning opportunities for staff and the As they support the diversity and learning needs of others. She said it was the last point that really did the North Albury school stand out. "For a place with two postal cases, we have so much diversity in our school how much you could imagine" , Parrett told us his location and find more news and local information of Abelc said that they have about 100 students with deficiency confirmation, about 85 students with English as an additional dialect, and at least 140 students of Aborogene or Strait of Torres Islander It has 'together we got' as our motto, but sustaining that we look at the fact that I have excellence in diversity, "Parrittett said." You have to be you even at our school, because this is all you can be, because everyone is, because everyone sinning and different. "There is a great time in school arts, particularly dancing. The school participates in Rock Eisteddfod, as well as the History Dance Festival Wakakirri - about 150 students and their teachers are tested during the sport to Three terms to prepare for performance. Performance.
