Review SummaryStaff was very friendly and check out with good service, keep up the good work.Well staffed with wonderful selection and prices.I found a person working the floor quickly he verified the price .So disappointed for this location. I wanted to buy a bicycle for my kid and did not work so I ask if it could be fixed before I check out , gentle man who help me was very helpful, but I ask if there were more in stock in the back they check and they had some so I ask to buy one from the back and to get it built and I could pick up next day. I was told by the lead team member that I couldn't do that. That I had to go online buy it and then pick up at the store which makes no difference and I ask to speak to a manager and same excuse. I think they didn't go beyond for that good customer service. upper management get this straightened out and maybe I will return to this location. Cool little pistol,and had huge moving sale. . Love this placeI drove almost two hours to buy $1400 gun safe which the web page said they had in stock. Once there the store was almost completely empty. No safe was available. Wasted my time. The web page should have stated store was relocating. Get more reviews We've detected that JavaScript is disabled in this browser. For 74 years, it was a privately held company owned by the Gochman family, until its May 2011 acquisition by Kohlberg Kravis Roberts. In October 2020, it was listed on NASDAQ. The origin of Academy Sports + Outdoors dates back to 1938, when Max Gochman opened the Academy Tire Shop in San Antonio, Texas. After a few years, Gochman began selling military surplus in his shop.[5] In 1970, Max's son, Arthur Gochman, bought a chain of six military surplus stores in Houston. At the time, Gochman was a practicing attorney in San Antonio. He had not been formally educated as a businessman, but he had learned much about the surplus retail business from his father.[3] Gochman bought out his partner in 1973 and changed the company's business name from Southern Sales to Academy Corp. The Academy name was borrowed from his father's stores. It came from a now-defunct San Antonio Catholic school named St. Henry's Academy. Max Gochman had opened his first store across the street from the school in the 1930s, selling pre-World War II surplus goods. Later, when he moved to Austin, he used the name for his four army-navy surplus stores. Because many University of Texas students and graduates lived in the Houston area and were familiar with the Austin stores, Max Gochman permitted his son to use the name, knowing that it would help his son's business. In 1978, the younger Gochman gave up his law practice and moved to Houston to assume active control of the company and complete the overhaul of its basic merchandising policies. Academy built new offices and a 50,000-sq-ft warehouse in 1981. The chain grew from eight stores in 1980 to 12 in 1985.[citation needed] By the end of the 1980s, Academy had become a popular Texas chain. Among other things, its outlets sold more state fishing licenses than its chief competitor, Oshman's Sporting Goods, or any other group of stores. Academy Sports + Outdoors, Valdosta, Georgia By 1990, Academy had grown to 18 stores. At that time, it was selling more cowboy boots than any other chain in the United States.[citation needed] It also began a period of more rapid expansion, jumping to 34 stores by 1995, the year after it first moved into two adjoining states. It opened its first store outside Texas in Edmond, Oklahoma, in June 1994, then added a store in Lafayette, Louisiana, the following November, thus ending the company's exclusive Texas identity. In 1997, Arthur's son, David Gochman, became CEO. [3] Academy's roots remain in Texas, though, and the epicenter of the company's business always has been the greater Houston area. Almost half of its stores are located there, as are the company headquarters and its distribution facility. As it has expanded beyond its home base, Academy has sought "hot-market" locales, places that from market analysis offered the promise of high-volume sales. The result has been that it has never had to close one of its new stores, all of which have been profitable since their first day of operation. David Gochman, the founder's son and Chinese-studies graduate from Harvard and University of Texas law-school graduate, joined Academy in 1995 on a full-time basis. By that time, his father, then 65, had built Academy into a $350 million retail chain and was ready to turn control of the business over to his 30-year-old son. David Gochman initially served as vice-president of store operations and general counsel, but in the following year he succeeded his father as Academy's chairman, president, and CEO.[6] In 1996, Academy expanded into Alabama. In 1998, it opened its first Florida location. In 1999, it expanded in Mississippi and Tennessee. In 2000, Academy opened its 50th location in Temple, Texas, then expanded into Arkansas in 2003 and Missouri and Georgia in 2005. In 2006, the company opened its first 100,000-sq-ft store. Rodney Faldyn became president of Academy in 2007, and at that time, the company expanded into South Carolina. In 2009, Academy opened a second distribution warehouse in Twiggs County, Georgia. In 2011, Academy Sports + Outdoors was acquired by Kohlberg Kravis Roberts (KKR).[7] Just months after acquisition, the brand launched an e-commerce store and became a multichannel retailer.[8] At that time, Faldyn became CEO and president. In 2012, Academy expanded into North Carolina and Kansas. In 2014, it expanded into Indiana and Kentucky. In 2015, J.K. Symamnyk became CEO and president. At that time, Academy opened its 200th store in Tupelo, Mississippi. In 2016, Academy expanded into Illinois and opened a third distribution warehouse in Cookeville, Tennessee. In 2018, the company opened its 250th store in Mansfield, Texas. Academy Sports + Outdoors in Indianapolis, Indiana. The store opened in 2024. On October 2020, Academy launched an initial public offering and became a public company listed on the Nasdaq with the ticker symbol ASO.[9] After going public, a continued national expansion plan was laid out calling for 8–10 stores per year starting in 2022. Shares originally stood below $13, but eventually rose to $40 by June 2021.[10] After its first public year, Academy debuted on the Fortune 500 list of 2021.[11] In 2022, Academy Sports + Outdoors opened its first locations in Virginia and West Virginia. It opened its first Ohio location in Zanesville in 2024. The company has plans to open up to 160-180 locations in the next five years. Academy owns the naming rights to the Bassmaster Classic (officially referred to the Academy Sports + Outdoors Bassmaster Classic).[12] It is also the official sporting retailer of the NCAA Southeastern Conference, Southwestern Athletic Conference, Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association, and the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Conference. The Houston Astros and the Indianapolis Colts also hold strong partnerships with the store. In May 2024, USA Today revealed that Academy sold 727 of the guns recovered in Mexico from 2020 to 2022, which was the largest number sold by any US gun seller, based on trace data from the Mexican Defense Ministry.[13] According to the report by USA Today, Mexican officials are particularly concerned about big-box stores near the US-Mexico border because of how frequently stores such as Academy sell multiple firearms in a single transaction.[13] Academy did not respond to detailed questions from USA Today.[13] Companies portalSports portal Bass Pro Shops Cabela's Dick's Sporting Goods Legendary Whitetails Scheels Sportsman's Warehouse List of Texas companies ^ Lindsay Peyton (September 17, 2018).
