Subscribed statement: Dbdumon part 9/10 One would have thought that Tim Burton would rest on his laurels after Batman's massive commercial success. Well, no, Edwards scissorhands have the more serious, mature and even more moving. This modern fairy tale skillfully combines elements of the main market (The Castle) and elements of public life (Pega's work as a representative of a cosmetics company) and can be divided into two parts: the first to embody Edward's rise: Thank you. He becomes the city's idol for his scissors, which is given to him as a hairdresser and gardener. In the second, Edward's case became the city of the Black Rulla after an intruder in which he felt uncomfortable (and the film becomes painful). Tim Burton tells this modern contemporary history, which includes a lot of poems and during his film. He strives to create an aesthetic beauty and successfully, especially with the gardens of the castle, the Edwardian sculptures and the beautiful Edwardian, despite his scissors. But Edward Knowt is also a film of contrasts. There is a striking contrast between the city in bright colors and the dark rooms of the castle as well as between the city of light and its contemptuous or ridiculous residents. They are also the subject of a satire of real society, and Burton tries to highlight their weaknesses. Of course, the citizens appreciate Edward, but only for his gifts. Otherwise, treat it unfaithful because it is different and eccentric in your eyes (you can be one of the residents!) And an error (theft) can lead to unexpected consequences ... on the contrary, Johnny Depp is simply unusual here the best roles. It brings a lot of tenderness, affection and above all a deep sensitivity to his character. After all, Tim Burton cleverly combined some cinematic styles in the same film. "Edward the Scge" has to please everything: comedy, fantastic, horror and drama. In addition, Gothic Music from Denny Elfman is very nice to create intensive emotions. Sometimes it is difficult to hold back your tears ... after all, a film that is both tender and brutal, and Tim Burton's best film since Ed Wood. "I am not ready yet." Edward Tim Burton is known for his dark films, but he also made more shiny films. One of Rated 9/10 by DBDUMONTELL, we would think Tim Burton's "Batman" was based on laurels after the enormous commercial success. Not at all, "Edward with Silver Hands" appears to be a more serious, mature, and even poignant film. This modern fairy tale can be divided into elements of the basic fairy tale (castle) and social life (Powious's work as a representative of a cosmetics company) and can be divided into two parts: the first, which summarizes Edward's introduction: Thanks for the hands: Thanks for the Hands gift to him from the hairdresser and gardener. From the scissors that gives, he becomes the god of the city. After the fall of Edward, after a break where he is unfortunately confused, the city becomes a ruin (and the movie becomes painful) Tim Burton tells this modern story, introducing a lot of poetry, and during his movie during the movie, he tried to create aesthetic beauty and especially Castle Gardens successful with, Edward and Edward's statues are beautiful despite their hands on scissors. But "Edward with Silver Hands" is also a contrast film. There is a distinct contrast between the city in light colors and the dark parts of the castle, but also between the bright city and its demeaning or visible inhabitants. In addition, they are the subject of satire of today's society, and Burton tries to highlight weaknesses. Of course, residents appreciate Edward, but only for his gifts. Otherwise, they will pay attention to him, because in their eyes he is different and eccentric (you can be one of the residents!) And a single mistake (theft with theft) can lead to unexpected consequences ... Johnny Deppken, Then simply find here one of his unusual and best roles. It brings its shape, a lot of refinement, attachment, and above all, deep sensitivity. Finally, Tim Burton was able to deftly mix several cinematographic styles in a movie. In "Silver Hands with Edward" we find everything: comedy, fantasy, horror and drama. In addition, Danny Elfman's Gothic music is largely great for generating intense emotions. Sometimes it's hard to stop the tears ... In short, a film that is both delicate, brutal, and the best of "and Wood" after Tim Burton. "I am not ready." - Edwardtim Burton is known for his dark films, but he has made lighter films. One of them is Silver Hands in Edward, a movie that still has all the Edwardian elements. It is the American film by director Tim Burton in 1990. Several film genres mix fantasy, romantic drama and comedy to tell the story of a young man Edward, which is created by the inventor, but is not completed and instead. Hand scissors. Edward will welcome Peg Boggs and fall in love with Kim when the inhabitants of the settlement where they live warmly welcome it before returning to it. The first cooperation with Burton is Johnny Depp, who played the lead role of Edward. Also playing Winona Ryder, Dianne Wiest, Alan Arkin, Kathy Baker and Anthony Michael Hall. The film also draws attention to the latest film by Vincent Price. The film started Depp's career and connected Burton with the Gothic movement. Extreme hands of Edward Mani can cause people confusion, so we decided to explain what actually happened at the end of the film. We will analyze the story elements of the narrative and the meaning of the final scene and, as Edward's relationship with whom and the end of the story. What happens in Edward Forbisc? The old lady tells her nephew the story of Edward Makas Eller, an artificial child with scissors instead of hands. The inventor was a very determined scientist who died shortly before Edward graduated. In the 1950s, long after Edward was created, Avon Peggy Bogs, a representative of Avon Peggy Cosmetics, visits a Gothic villa on the urban hill, where she finds Edward himself and isolated. Peggy realizes that having sharp fingers is harmless, so he decides to take him to his home in a bright city where he lives. Despite the dark and scary Edward's colorful neighborhood of Peggy, on the other hand, sincere friendship with the youngest son Kevin and her husband Bill. Among other things, despite Kim's initial horror, young girlfriend Peggy will fall in love with Kim. Other residents of Peggy's neighborhood are influenced by Edward, who is very skilled in creating vegetable sculptures with shrubs, using long knives instead of hands; Edward will then use this ability to create great hairstyles for its neighbors. So there was a sense of trust and sympathy for Edoard, except for two people: religious fanatics of Esmeralda (EdoardoAnd Jim, an arrogant and arrogant friend, Joyce Monroe, Peggy's snobbish neighbor, wants to make money running Edwards' talents and offers to open a beauty salon together, using her skills, and even sexually seduces Edward. Who runs in front of her in a state of shock. Meanwhile, Jim, who is trying to buy a new van, is arrested. Kim is the only one who wants to gain from the opposition and wants to help Edward, but Jim took her by force. Peggy manages to get him out of prison after a psychological examination, and it is revealed that Edward has been living out of the long isolation of the society he lived in, with no real sense of reality or logical thinking and no help from someone who doesn't, and the evil was clearly distinct. Meanwhile, Joyce accuses him of being rejected by Edwards' deviance, it's not fair that he tried to rape her. This strong accusation, coupled with Esmeralda's arrest for theft and constant slander, damages Edward's reputation throughout the region. During Edward's Christmas season, she is shunned and shunned by everyone except the Borgs family, who miss the neighborhood because of it. Kim thanks Edward for not telling the police and apologizes for what happened. To his surprise, Edward admits that he knew it was Jim's house and didn't say anything because she asked for help. While you prepare the jewels, Edward begins to form an ice sculpture of an angel, creating a jet for the snow bottle with each quick hit of the blade, to which Kim begins to dance excitedly to. Suddenly, Jim calls out to her loudly, and Kim circles around, scratching Edwards' shoulder. Jim gets it wrong with Edward, claiming that he intentionally hurt the girl. Offended, Edward disappears and tears the clothes they gave him, wandering through the rage zone and destroying his handiwork. This attracts the attention of neighbors who scare the police. Angered by the way Jim treats Edward, Kim breaks off his engagement to him. While Kim wants to manipulate her mother, Peggy admits that Edward regrets bringing him into the crowd and thinks the best thing for Edward is to come back to his houseBecause he will never accept it because of the respectable mentality of the city. While Peggy and Bill are looking for him, Edward returns home to Kim and she hits him in his arms, happy that he is fine. Jim, altered by Kim's broken commitment, cannot bear the idea that she will leave him and decide to return. Suddenly Edward jumps on a boy to be safe and prevent Jim's investment in Kevin when he returned from a friend's house, and accidentally cut his face. However, the neighbors who witnessed the incident were convinced that Edward attacked the child. Worse, Jim walks on Edward and dropped him on the ground; The last one, shoulder injuries were released. The police arrive and Edward escapes and sheltered in his castle. A police officer who helped him in prison, who understands his country and understands that he is not his fault, decides to release him by releasing fire to simulate his death and urged people to leave. But the neighborhood does not listen to it and it invades the gardens of the Palais. How does Edward Scissor end? Edward was sheltered in his mansion and learned that Kim followed him. Jim also comes to Edward and the attack with a pistol. Due to his gentle character, Edward is unable to answer and only after his attempt to defend his Kim, he instinctively responds and fatally fascinated by the launch through the mansion window, seeing the neighborhood where he was. With them, in the meantime. Kim admits Edward's love for her and withdrew from her kisses. After taking Edward's spare part, Kim shows her to his neighbors and says that Edward died of the roof and that the two boys killed themselves. The neighbors, blinded and even upset, leave the villa and return home. An old lady who tells her story to her granddaughter, he turns out that Kim, and she ends her story by saying that she has never seen Edward since then. She also declares that she decided not to visit her in the mansion (since Edward looks immortal for her artificial nature) so that Edward can remember her young appearance. However, she adds that snow fell into the neighborhood every Christmas, and nothing happened. In fact, Edward is identical and each winter snow produces ice statues andOn the last moving scene of the film, it shows how Genç Kim dances and how he model and watch. Why does it snow at the end of the Edward article? If you remember the end of the film, remember that the end is very symbolic and very sad. Edward cut the society because it was different from the common metaphor of this film, which was always spectacular. However, this is the general symbolism of the film and does not reflect the sad expression of the end, not necessarily. The end of the film is not sad because Edward is isolated from the community; That's why the film is sad, but sad about the sad fate of the last Edward. Edward, inhuman creatures, was accepted that he spent the rest of his life in the same state, never aged and referred to Kim. He creates the scenes he lives, but he never experiences it again. The pain he felt stems from the fact that he cannot live with whom he loves his life, so he used cold and symbol of loneliness to recover painful memories. Edward suffered more as the snow was attacking the city. Who knew that, but as a young girl who loves him, he decided not to see him again to protect his good memories about him. Maybe it was better, I'm not completely sure, but it's a sad and heartbreaking end that no one deserves in the film. Won.
