Human habits to produce goods such as clothing, housing, food has had a serious impact on natural resources and social development. Forestland is being cleared, trees are being cut for lumber for homes and buildings, land is being cleared for crops and livestock (Turk & T.Bensel, 2011). If not monitored and checked and barriers are not maintained, continued harvesting of the earth's resources to manufacture and produce the goods humans seek after will damage landscapes and ecosystems beyond repair. One example of resources such as lumber to build housing and expand urban areas, which also use land, is a cause of deforestation. While deforestation meets human needs, it also has an overwhelming, and distressing, results, such as, extinction of plants and animals, and climate change that is global as well as social conflicts (Turk & Bensel, 2011). An effort to control the rate that forest land is disappearing in one country, Brazil placed a two-year ban on mahogany logging in much of the Amazon in 1998 ("BRASILIA, Brazil," 1998). By placing a ban that country was able to too lim...
