Definition of Burglary

Crime is defined as an act that violates the criminal law and is punishable by the state. (Conklin, 2013, p. 3) Burglary is considered a property crime by The Uniform Crime Reporting program (UCR) and defined as “entry into a structure using force without permission to commit a felony or theft.”(FBI, 2010) The UCR collects data on various crimes that are reported by law enforcement agencies. By collecting and publishing data received from law enforcement officers the information can be used in the future to improve the time officers respond to calls as well as give the public information on crime statistics.

Research Strategies in Burglaries

There are many different ways of researching crimes and criminal behaviors. It is important to research how crimes happen and what makes criminals behave the way they do so that crimes can be reduced and the criminals can be caught and punished as needed without others getting hurt. Studying criminal behavior gives us insight on how to teach others to protect themselves from these crimes happening, improve response time of officers to a call and even help officers find victims quicker. For this paper I have chosen to discuss the Observation Approach meaning to watch and study a criminal in their environment while staying unknown, this can be done in different ways such as using cameras, microphone or even private investigating. I have also chosen The Survey Approach when it is applied to the crime of Burglary. Surveying past criminals gives us the opportunity to ask a variety of questions from criminals who can stay anonymous then we can analyze the results and work towards ways of protecting citizens. In 2010 the UCR reported that there was a 2 percent decrease in bu...
