John Papa 'I'i was an influential figure in Hawaiian history. Not only was he an active participant on several boards, committees and benches in the Hawaiian government; He also worked in schools as a kahu (teacher). Though he was best known for his recollection of life during the Kamehameha reign in Hawaii. His journals were published in the Hawaiian Language newspaper Kanepaepa Ku'oko'a. John Papa 'I'i was born in Waipio, Oahu on August 3, 1800, with the birth name Keoni Kalekane. A series of events altered his name to become the famous alias, he is now referred to by: John Papa 'I'i. He adopted the name "Papa" after his uncle, who had been his guardian in early adolescence. He presumably acquired the name "'I'i", due to the...show more content...

In 1910 he accompanied his uncle to become a companion of Liholiho (King Kamehameha II) and servant in the Royal Hawaiian Court. In 1820 he joined Liholiho to attend schooling in reading and writing taught by Hiram Bingham. Liholiho was eager for John to attend missionary schooling, because he wanted to observe the impact Christian teaching would have on John. After becoming literate, John Papa 'I'i assisted the missionaries in the translation of several texts from English to Hawaiian. When Liholiho died, John Papa 'I'i became a kahu for Victoria Kama'ama. He also served as a member in the King Kamehameha III...show more content...

He was one of four men appointed by the king to the Treasury Board in 1842. The Treasury Board was a grouping of people who set in place a system of organized account keeping, a feat that had never been previously attempted. He was also a member of the Privy Council from 1845 to 1859. The Privy Council's purpose was to provide the King with the necessary information to make decisions. John Papa 'I'i was then appointed to the Board of Land Commissioners to Quiet Land Titles underneath the second organic act in 1846. He was the only Hawaiian to complete his term on the board. During this time John Papa 'I'i was also serving in the House of Nobles. He was their representative and speaker while the constitution was being created. He held his position in the House of Nobles until his death in 1870. In 1855 he spent one session in the House of Representatives. 'I'i also spent time as a court judge. In 1848 he served as a Superior Court Judge, he was an Associate Justice in affiliation with the kingdom from 1852-1864 as
