“Homelessness—a situation in which an individual or family lacks permanent housing” (Homelessness). Homeless shelters are an essential part to removing the homeless off of the streets and providing them with a means of reaching where they want to be. While homeless shelters are not an answer to this issue, they are a major factor in providing a solution. Homeless shelters are established to reduce the number of people living on the streets. Shelters for homeless people allow them access to the food, clothing, shelter, and medication they would otherwise be denied if still roaming the streets. Gainesville is making an active approach to resolving this issue. There is no way to completely eradicate the increasing numbers of homeless people, but Gainesville is taking steps to give them temporary housing to get back on their feet. The majority of homeless people are war veterans, people suffering from mental problems and people dealing with drug addictions. Throughout time, homelessness has always been an issue. “Various definitions of homelessness have been developed that describe homeless as those who are currently or have been living on the street or in a shelter for the past 24 hours or who have been staying with friends or family since leaving a permanent residence or who have no fixed residence” (Thompson). Homeless shelters take these people in and help them to get to where they need to be. They provide the homeless with clothing, food, a place to sleep, and be at service to their health needs. “Ms Rushford [Western Team Coordinator for the
