Euthanasia: The pros Anatomy Durkos Sarah Carter Jan 6, 2013 Over the years there has been a debate on whether euthanasia is a “humane” form of death. Some believe it isn't humane and others believe euthanasia is personal choice. Euthanasia is legal in Australia and in four states in the United States. The legality of euthanasia is based on ethics primarily. I am pro euthanasia for many reasons; Euthanasia is cheaper, it ends the suffering of patients, and self-determinism. Euthanasia is the assisted ending of a person's life in response to pain and suffering. There are two types of Euthanasia: Voluntary and involuntary. (“Top 10 Pros and Cons – Euthanasia, 2010”) Voluntary euthanasia refers to a patient and physician reaching a decision on euthanasia together. The patient may want the procedure done and says so. The patient may ask for “help” with dying, refuse medical treatment and refusing to eat, or simply letting health decline without receiving help resulting in death. Involuntary euthanasia is usually murder but it could be seen as being “helpful” from a different view. For example, in most movies with zombie apocalyptic themes there is someone who runs a little too slowly and proceeds to get bitten by a zombie. The infected person (now zombie) will eventually try to kill everyone around them so it would be best for a non-infected human to shoot the zombie. That is an example of involuntary euthanasia because although the zombie doesn't know they're going to die, the death is perceived as a good deed being that it saved multiple lives. America is all about money. Everything in America is run off of a dollar and how much money a person can make or if they can preserve the money they have already. If eu..... middle of paper to keep me alive (unless I had government assisted insurance) so just let people die if they want to. It wouldn't effect the United States negatively and the only way it would is if there was team of doctors who wanted to kill all of their patients for no apparent reason, but that's a strong what if.
