Mohandas Karamchand Gandhi was born on October 2, 1869 at Porbandar located in Gujarat and was assassinated on January 30, 1948. Mahatma Gandhi was the superior leader and revolutionist of Indian nationalism in British-ruled India. He led Republic of India to autonomy and galvanized movements for civil rights and independence across the globe. Just like other revolutionist in history, Gandhi took his time to evolve and advanced his techniques to confirm that his actions created an effect. His acceptance in several religions was very much admirable. He was viciously reliable and this sincerity helped him throughout his life in every situation. Gandhi played a very important role in achieving independence for India without any violence. Martin Luther King used most of Gandhi's fundamentals/ principals to end racial segregation and discrimination against black Americans.

Some of the main movements and freedom struggles led by Gandhi were Non Co-operation Movement, Civil Disobedience Movement, Quit India Movement, and Indian Independence. One of the primary series of passive protests nationwide was the non-cooperation movement started by Mohandas Karamchand Gandhi. This movement formally started the Ghandian era in that country. During this freedom struggle, the non-cooperation movement was essentially geared toward creating the Indians responsive to the actual fact that the government may be opposed and if done seriously, it'll keep an audit on them. Thus, instructional establishments were banned, foreign merchandise and other people forsaking off their appointive seats in government establishments were banned as well. Although the movement was unsuccessful, Indians woke up to the conception of going against country.
