International students and the right of working while studying in USA International students should be granted the right to work while studying in the United States because they need to develop skills they are learning in school through practice such as communication skill, be able to cater for their living expenses, gain experience of the fields they are preparing to work in and make contribution in the country's growth for good recommendation. International students should be allowed to work while studying but, in line with the courses they pursuing and under regulated conditions to ensure quality is gained and delivered. Giving international students a permit to work-off campus offers them a chance to interact with residents at work place where interaction is very essential. This gives the students a chance to develop their communication skills because they get a chance to talk and improve on their English language. It is observed that most of the students shy away from speaking with the residents due to fear of displaying their accent while communicating which may sound funny at times. Developing communication skills especially in English language which is very diverse Worldwide and is the language used while teaching in class helps the students so much. Research reveals that most of the students are from English-speaking countries, which makes it an added advantage. It helps build confidence in speaking and a good command in writing, these skills are important when applying for jobs and writing curriculum vitas. In all colleges in the United States, students are required to pay for their classes' tuition either by themselves, their parents, guardians or a scholarship that they may have. The average tuition fee for an individual..... middle of papernizations develop. Weighing the contribution international students give and the value it adds to their life by allowing them to work in United States, there is every reason to grant them the right. Under good regulation and monitoring channels it can be a very effective strategy to integrate in all institutions of learning that is of importance to the government, beneficial to individuals and society.
