Frankenstein is a novel written by Mary Shelley.

The Sorrows of Young Werther by Johann Wolfgang von Goethe is one of the literary texts interwoven in Mary Shelley's novel Frankenstein. It talks of a story about a girl Lotte and a boy named Werther. The two fell in love although the girl was already engaged to an older man Abert. When Lotte marries the older man, Werther commits suicide because of rejection. The creature in Frankenstein finds this book and teaches himself to read from it. Shelley makes a reference to the novel The Sorrows of the Young Werther and Victor's creature gets hold of the book and reads to practice language skills and pass time.

Through this book, the creature learns a lot about feeling and emotions. The creature says "As I read, however, I applied much personally to my own feelings and condition" (Shelley 114). This shows how much the creature learnt from the book because Victor created it and left it all alone without any teachings on how to speak and act like a woman.

The sources of Werther's sorrows are similar to the sources of the creature's suffering in Frankenstein. This is because, both the Creature and Werther were rejected by the people they love. They all wanted to be apart of the people's lives and day to day activities but fate did not allow it. Werther was left alone when the girl she loved got married to an elder man. Comparably, the creature in Frankenstein was abandoned by his creator and left all alone in a world whereby he does not even know how to speak and relate with the people around him. Werther had wished to spend his entire life with the girl she loved and when it turned out impossible, he took away his life by committing suicide so as to escape the pain he was going through....

...ng. He says "Cursed, cursed Creator! Why did I live?" He hated himself for being alive and all the things that were happening to him. This is a reflection of the dejection the creature discovered through reading The Sorrows of Werther. He contemplates what he could have done so as not to face the humiliations he received from the people around him. These humiliations created a lot of suffering and anger in him and he wishes that he could have ended his life just like Werther so as not to suffer any more.

In conclusion, The Sorrows of Werther opened the creature's eyes to the immediate world around him and the pains associated with life especially when one is rejected by the people they love.
