There are many endangered species out in the world and there's many ways there being affected. But there's many ways we can help these animals and plants. There's no reason we cannot fix what we started. If we don't we will lose our beautiful environment. There is nothing normal about today's rate of extinction. Booming human population growth over the last two century's has put and continues to put many life forms in danger. The problem is no one knows how extinction of organisms will affect the other members of its ecosystem but the removal of a single species can set off a chain reaction affecting others. Species are lost as their habitats are destroyed. In nineteen seventy three congress passed the endangered species act recognizing that endangered and threatened species of wild life and plants are esthetic, ecological, historical, recreational and scientific value to the nation and its people. The question is are we doing enough to save and protect the wildlife and plants. There are ways to help save these important life forms you can join the (NWO) it defends and enforces the endangered species act. They also try to reduce the threats to wildlife that lead to their endangerment by encouraging limited the use of pesticides and advocating care to avoid contamination to water. Another way is to become an advocate of the dangers of global warming. Changes in temp due to global warming directly affect plants and animals though threats of disease, wildfires and the loss of habitat. You can also join and support conservation efforts such as those advocated by the world wildlife fund. Lobby your congressmen to vote for all legislation that pertains to the protection of endangered species.
