Same-Sex Marriage. The debate for and against same-sex marriage has been going on for years. Men and women have protested to our lawmakers to give them the right to legally marry someone of their own gender and receive all the rights associated with marriage that involves a woman and a man. Until I entered this class, I never really thought about what privileges were included in marriage. In class we discussed the privileges which included: tax benefits, health benefits by the employer, decision-making if the spouse is incapacitated, rights to inheritances, child custody, right of residency for a foreign spouse, and social acceptance. For this assignment, I had to carefully look at both sides of the argument and come to my honest opinion regarding same-sex marriages and in fact, if these privileges should be extended only to heterosexual marriages.

Marriage is an established social institution and should be entered into by a man and a woman. I have strong views against homosexuality; therefore, I believe that same-sex marriage is not moral. My reasons are based on the following factors: the act of having sex with someone of your own gender is not considered natural, and most importantly same-sex marriages cannot produce children. I do not agree with legalizing same-sex marriages; however, I do not see anything wrong with legal contracts between same-sex couples that would address some of the privileges of marriage discussed earlier. You might say then why not just legalize the marriage, but my views do not support same-sex unions. Legalizing same-sex marriages, in my opinion, would influence young people to break away from being married and having children; therefore, this would result in changing the makeup of our society. W...

...ages and backgrounds often feel that society will look down on them for having children and are pressured into having an abortion. When faced with challenges of life and financial worries, some women may often feel abortion is the right thing to do. The reasons may vary from interfering with one's career, happiness, or lifestyle. I do not agree that these situations are valid reasons to have an abortion and would consider it immoral.

The legality of abortions is very important to protect women who make the decision to have an abortion. If abortions were illegal, women would still get abortions from unlicensed individuals or get abortions done in other countries. Abortion is an issue that will continue to be debated but is up to the woman to choose. In conclusion, every woman has to consider her own ethical views when faced with the decision to have an abortion.
