Introduction

The anthropology section of the Hilton C. Buley library is relatively small when compared to the rest of the library. The print collection is comprised of approximately seventy-eight shelves with an average of thirty books per shelf and a media collection of just two shelves containing mostly VHSs. Journal wise the collection contains an impressive amount of print and electronic journals covering specific to general topics within the field.

Anthropology covers a wide range of topics and is described by the American Anthropological Association as “the study of humans, past and present. To understand the full sweep and complexity of cultures across all of human history, anthropology draws and builds upon knowledge from the social and biological sciences as well as the humanities and physical sciences.” (American Anthropological Association)

Although the field of anthropology may cover many different topics the collection policy for Hilton C. Buley Library recognizes five main subjects and their corresponding Library of Congress call numbers as the core of the collection. They are: General anthropology (GN 1-300), Ethnology and Ethnography (GN 301-699), Prehistoric Archeology (GN700-999), Folklore (GR 1-9999), and General Manners and Customs (GT1- 999).

While these five subjects are the focus of the anthropology collection it is important to remember that many subjects do cross into different call numbers and stack locations.
